

CALLING ALL ALUMNI

School of Nursing & Midwifery AT CURTIN

Volunteers are now being sought for several hours every two months to assist with documenting and preserving photographs and artefacts. Support will be available from the University's archivist.

Since the School's establishment 35 years ago, a significant history has been generated. A project is underway to preserve that history in the form of records, photographs and artefacts. A professional archivist has been working to set up guidelines and processes to assist in identifying and preserving these historical items.

An information session will be held on Tuesday 10 November at 3pm at Curtin University of Technology's School of Nursing and Midwifery, Building 405, Room 214, for those who are interested in volunteering. Christina Garnett will give a short presentation on preserving photographs and artefacts.

To register for the information session, please telephone Meisha Press on 9266 2142.
